Medical Freedom Leaders Ask RFK Jr.: How Would You Fix U.S. Health Policy?

In a health policy roundtable discussion on Tuesday, leading critics of U.S. health policy asked Robert F. Kennedy Jr., Children's Health Defense chairman on leave and Democratic presidential candidate, how his administration would address key issues of concern to the medical freedom movement.

Democratic presidential candidate Robert F. Kennedy Jr. on Tuesday hosted a roundtable discussion with leading critics of prevailing health policy who debated topics ranging from public health agency capture to climate change.

Approximately 11,000 viewers watched live as Dr. Pierre Kory, Maureen McDonnell, Mikki Willis, Dr. Joseph Mercola, Patrick Gentempo, Dr. Sherri Tenpenny, Sayer Ji and Del Bigtree asked Kennedy, founder and chairman on leave from Children's Health Defense (CHD), a series of questions about how his administration would address key issues of concern to the medical freedom movement.

"This is the moment when the collapsing center, the disintegrating center, the dysfunctional health system finally opens up and what has so long been 'alternative' might become a new mainstream that could transform the health of this country," roundtable facilitator and author Charles Eisenstein said, kicking off the discussion.

McDonnell, a holistic pediatric nurse and founder of Millions Against Medical Mandates, asked Kennedy how he would transform a healthcare system from one controlled by Big Pharma "where for every ailment there's a drug and for every infection there's a vaccine or one in the pipeline" to one that treats the root causes of the illnesses and chronic conditions plaguing the nation.

Kennedy said Pharma's "mercantile ambitions" have been allowed to overwhelm the healthcare system, and conflicts of interest have to be eliminated.

That includes ending advertising by Pharma, redirecting grants toward studying chronic diseases, making public health data such as the Vaccine Safety Datalink available to researchers, and having the U.S. Department of Justice hold journals accountable for "racketeering with the pharmaceutical industry to systematically lie to the public," he said.

Kory, founder and president of Front Line COVID-19 Critical Care Alliance, asked Kennedy if expanding funding for the National Institutes of Health (NIH) to expand oversight and data collection would help to ensure commercial and political bias stayed out of research.

Kennedy said he thought NIH didn't need more money, it needed a new focus.

He said NIH ought to study the etiology of chronic disease rather than studying infectious diseases, which pose a lesser threat to human health, and incubating new pharmaceutical products. NIH scientists personally profit from inventing new products, which is a practice he said needs to end.

Most importantly, Kennedy said, he would "end all gain-of-function research," which he said is just a disaster. "It's given us no benefits. It's given us everything from Lyme disease to COVID and many many other diseases."

Gentempo talked about the "tyranny [that] can take hold all in the name of medicine and all in the name of science" as seen during the COVID-19 pandemic. He asked what Kennedy thought could be done so it never happens again.

"We need to make it clear that the Constitution is inviolable and that even in an emergency, the most dire emergency, you can't waive the Constitution and that you have to go through the Democratic process," Kennedy said. To protect that, he said, Congress must change the criteria for declaring states of emergency.

Osteopath and natural health specialist Mercola talked about the suppression of dissenting ideas. "The Biden regime has been the most authoritarian administration in the United States' history," he said, and ideas like those being discussed in the round table were "relentlessly censored from head to toe."

Kennedy said this censorship was a betrayal of liberal ideology, which "is about ideas … triumphing in the marketplace of ideas."

He talked about the recent controversy over his proposed debate with Dr. Peter Hotez, where people defending Hotez's refusal to debate did so on the grounds that he is an "expert" who should not debate non-experts.

Kennedy said:

> "What they're saying is there's kind of a high priesthood of people who are experts, and they should not debate anybody else because they're the high priest and they should just be trusted. …
> "Now what they can say is, well, I'm a crazy person. And it, you know, and it, it just gives credence to my crazy ideas. But my … crazy ideas already have credence. …
>
> "By the way, science is rooted in reason. It's rooted in empiricism. And if you can't defend science on the battlefield of reason … you're not really a scientist, as I or any scientist is expected to defend their hypothesis in debate, in heated, fierce debate."

Responding to Tenpenny's question about how he would select his medical advisory team, Kennedy said he would draw from his extensive network of people with government, public health and scientific experience — people like Kory and Dr. Meryl Nass.

He added that his advisors would be dissidents who were moving away from the pharmaceutical paradigm to "center all of our objectives on actual metrics that show better health."

Sayer Ji, the founder of alternative medicine portal GreenMedInfo, asked Kennedy where he stood on the World Health Organization (WHO) pandemic treaty and the proposed amendments to the International Health Regulations, which he said could threaten U.S. sovereignty.

"Under my presidency, we're not going to be submitting to any WHO treaty, and I'm going to be really reevaluating the U.S. relationship with the WHO on a lot of bases," Kennedy said.

He said the WHO previously did important work, rooted in localized processes and contexts, but that today the WHO has been "hijacked by big corporations who want to promote their technologies and promote one cookie cutter technology for every problem."

Willis, who produced the "Plandemic" documentaries, told Kennedy that as a veteran environmental activist, he was concerned with the way "the climate change narrative has been grossly exaggerated by power-hungry politicians," and asked whether Kennedy agreed with that assessment and how he would retell the climate story.

Kennedy said he believes climate change is an existential threat. He said as an outdoorsman, he watched the climate change, and the idea that carbon traps heat has long been known.

He also said he studied the science produced as early as the 1970s by the Exxon scientists who predicted the corporation's practices would have devastating climatic effects.

But he agreed with Willis that the "climate narrative has been hijacked" by actors such as the World Economic Forum, Bill Gates and other elites "to consolidate their power, diminish democracy, constrict civil and human rights, and to impose top-down totalitarian controls."

Kennedy proposed a "market-based" rather than top-down approach to dealing with climate issues, where the cheapest and most efficient energy sources would be rewarded.

Those would generally be renewable sources, he said, providing examples of the environmental costs created by coal and gas exploitation that would have to be internalized in the type of system he's advocating.

He added that people didn't have to believe in global warming to see that coal dependency has to end.

Tenpenny said Kennedy's position on vaccines had been mixed and asked for clarification about whether he was against vaccines.

"I'm not against vaccines any more than I'm against medicine," Kennedy said, adding that he would support a vaccine if there was evidence it made people safer and healthier.

But, he added that he was against vaccine mandates and all medical mandates.

Finally, McDonnell brought up the challenges of building collaboration in the health freedom movement and asked Kennedy how he would deal with political divisions on all of these issues, and beyond.

He said he thought people's anger is rooted in the fact that they are being lied to, censored and gaslighted. "The principal antidote for that is a government that is just rigorously truthful," he said.

Documentarian and journalist Bigtree, who spoke last, said the health freedom movement is "truly a people's movement. And it doesn't matter what the media says about it. They will not be able to stop us."

Vice and Rolling Stone immediately published articles criticizing the roundtable and its panelists.

I would appreciate the opportunity to view a rebroadcast of RFK, Jr's roundtable, as I had an emergency come up and was unable to join live.

I hope that this is possible, as I have a great deal of respect for Mr. Kennedy!

My wife and I watched Bobby during the roundtable discussion and cheered as he answered each of the other participants questions.
Hopefully nobody here is attempting to find out about Bobby on MSM as they are the judge, jury, and executioner of his life's work by assailing him 24/7 with constant lies.
Go on YouTube and search "RFK Jr." and there are many videos which have him speaking his truths.
Also search "LondonReal" which is put on by his friend Brian Rose who speaks directly to Bobby about a wide range of topics.
MSM are all liars. Don't waste your time with them.

I was in a natural history study at NIH for four and a half years. Using alternative healing, I shrank a meningioma brain tumor by 2mm. That isn't a lot, but Neurofibromatosis Type 2 tumors NEVER shrink. I was kicked out of the study because an NIH psychiatrist said that I was severely mentally ill and that without psychiatric help they were afraid that I might become harmful to myself or others. That was in November 2012.
I contacted a licensed, practicing psychologist who wrote up a rebuttal. He wrote, "She made it clear that it is hard for her to accept the fact that a medical professional diagnosed her as psychotic when her healing experiences are legitimate… It is my professional opinion that Ms.____ does not meet the criteria for a Psychotic Disorder or a Mood Disorder, NOS."

I was unable to see this Roundtable discussion, but I'm sure it was quite interesting. It's a damn shame that MSM and publications such as VICE and ROLLING STONE (who used to be good, btw) have to trash him and his candidacy - without even giving him a platform to speak! Just ignorant and WRONG on so many levels.

I watched the roundtable discussion and love his open mindedness. I could see that he is willing to change his opinion as he is presented with additional information.

Still, I was disappointed that no-one brought up the lifestyle/diet and nutritious food issues. One thing that really needs to change is how medical schooling ignores these fundamental issues by failing to provide classes addressing how our diets and lifestyle profoundly influence health. Another major issue that wasn't addressed involves radiation from WiFi, cellphones, smart meters, and all sorts of modern devices. The FCC has refused to follow court orders as it continues to ignore thousands of studies showing harm. I suspect that RFK will address these issues if he wins.

Regardless of those issues, He is the best candidate by far and he has my full support.

RFK Jr. talks about both of these 2 topics you mentioned in his 3 hour podcast with Joe Rogan. Very well worth one's time to listen to/watch the whole podcast. Episode #1999 available on Spotify.

RFK Jr. is fully aware of all the issues you mentioned but one hour is not enough time to discuss all of them. CHD is fighting WiFi and smart meter radiation and talk about food, toxins, pollution, medical school training, etc. It's a good thing voters have a year and a half to hear all he has to say.

There are SO MANY issues to be addressed, for sure. I have seen RFK Jr. speak about our broken food system, as well as the other issues you mention. Since he has such a keen understanding about the corruption within the medical paradigm - Big Pharma, vaccines, etc - I am certain he will address the other issues as his candidacy progresses.
If only MSM would give him a chance to speak - and not little soundbites of their choosing!!

I watched this and the panel asked very good questions and openly discussed any issues they disagreed with. During the whole episode you get a strong sense of his love of debate which was very refreshing, he was not phased by any criticism but welcomed it. He puts other politicians to shame who do everything they can to shut down debate and instead become actors putting on a staged performance while sticking to their script.

The first item on the list is to repeal HMOA73 and take profit out of health care. The only funding of taxpayers is to develop holistic health care and remove the toxic chemicals out of drugs.
Next I'd to stop all chem trails filled with toxic substances that cause sickness and death including destruction of farming products. Also to eliminate toxic pesticides and herbicides! A start - then reduce politicians compensation to the minimum wage level and retirement plans on social security!
Stop wars, shut down the 800+ military bases, stop development of weapons and irrigate deserts - plant more trees!

I think we could leave a few military bases in strategic areas of the world, but shutting down many of the 800 bases sounds good to me.

I forgot to add, slam shut the Federal Reserve and IRS/FBI/CIA and other alphabet criminal org's, claw back the $quadrillions stolen since and before 1913, then we'd probably wouldn't need bases in strategic areas - the rest of the world would follow our path and let centuries of peace prevail.

Just when I think I couldn't love and respect RFK Jr any more because I've already reached maximum loyalty/ respect/ admiration …he goes and says something even greater. This isn't just problem solving, this is next level paradigm shifting to a world I want my kids and grandkids to live in.
Yes.
That's it.
That's the answer. Amazing.

Well, at least we heard answers from a politician and a respected person that we can chew on. First and foremost is that the 1986 vaccine laws must be done away with and both the CDC and FDA need to be completely rebuilt from the ground up. Big pharma's ultra-excessive lust and greed for profits, even at the cost of lives, must be blown up.

Re-evaluate US relationship with the W.H.O? Not what most of us wanted to hear. We should pull out of the WHO PERIOD. Organizations such as the World Health Council is a parallel organization that would do the people's work. I totally agree with Mikki, the Democratic party has fucked us over for far too long, they need to be disenfranchised and run out of Washington for their crimes against humanity. I disagree with a lot of RFK's policy ideology, however, he is the only candidate speaking truth to power and vows to reform the DNC. I don't think that's possible but I appreciate the intention. I disagree with his stance on Israel and I hope he is saying what he is saying to get elected. His twitter photo of him standing arm and arm with Rabbi Shmuley who was quoted as saying ""Bobby told me he had no idea that Waters was a vicious antisemite and when he studied the issue and the facts, he immediately deleted the tweet." and RFK Jr. let this statement stand so he must agree with Shmuley's smear of Roger Waters. Many independents eliminated voting for the democratic candidate because of this debacle. I also thought is was a bit callus for RFK Jr. to say he does not care if Mikki believes "climate change". So I'm with Mikki, RFK Jr. does not yet have my vote. Not that our votes count. The DNC has machines they can turn in a second; How else could a demented old war criminal account for 81 million votes?

3 things I would do
1. get rid of the no liablity aspect under emergency use authorization- heck as it is companies can do whatever they want with no consequences

2. put pressure on the EPA to put stricter regulations on the manufacture and use of poisons and harmful chemicals or better still ban poisons- a poison is a poison- there are no safe levels - they make people sick- work to totally get rid of them

3. get rid of 5G - it harms the body

People like Dr. Hotez, and his minions, don't realize that there is an army of orthodox physicians, who are part of the Great Barrington Declaration, that are experts too. I guess it depends what expert you really want to believe, in the end. The one "expert". Or, and army of them? Funny how the MSM, and the establishment believe the handful of white tower "experts". But, we do know now it's to fulfill their agendas.

Too easy on the corrupt who may continue to be corrupt and do things anyways to hurt people with their New World order agenda. Coal/oil/natural gas should be used until something better is there, but not stopped instantly trying to kill off people since wind power and solar may not help enough. Vaccine are causing Autism. There may be hidden ingredients. They prevented Autism by no vaccine until 3 years old and then spread them out, but they may not help and may hurt. They may have weaponized all vaccines now to lower the population. Protect natural help. It is NOT climate change, but weather warfare/weather manipulation by the corrupt people. Bill Gates/Fauci etc.. playing god need to be stopped/held accountable. Yes....Lyme is a bio-weapon like this last shot. WHO is mostly funded by Bill Gates, which wants to force shots on all people to lower the population by 80% and control the rest. NIH is corrupt it seems.

Coal/oil/gas can be phased out if electric companies are required to invest all new development in solarizing houses and businesses. Most property owners should be collecting monthly checks from the companies, not paying bills.

Why was the video of this important roundtable taken offline? I watched most of it, but not all. The distinguished panel asked important, even prescient, questions and I considered this as likely going down as the most important RFK Jr. campaign appearance of his entire 2024 run, at least to his supporters. It was available for perhaps a day after the roundtable was over. Yet it's been taken offline. Please put it back online in its entirety with no alterations to its initial broadcast.

Interesting terminology from Kennedy:

• "..center all of our objectives on actual metrics that show better health…"
• "…rooted in localized processes and contexts…"
• "climate change is an existential threat…"
• "Kennedy proposed a 'market-based' rather than top-down approach to dealing with climate issues, where the cheapest and most efficient energy sources would be rewarded."
• "'I'm not against vaccines any more than I'm against medicine,' Kennedy said, adding that he would support a vaccine if there was evidence it made people safer and healthier."

Be careful of Sir Kennedy and the Camelot Dream. The fox is in the henhouse and he is very charming. All the world is a stage and it's currently being set for Impact Investing and the data beast. Your data. Your social credit scores and lifelong learning points.

I say this as someone who has a vaccine-injured child, has loved RFK, and been supporting CHD for years. I am also, however, open to new information and following the logic, reason, and facts wherever they lead, even if it makes me uncomfortable.

I listened, and unfortunately, JFK Jr has not yet commited to exit the WHO. He said he would not participate in the Treaty, but he didn't say anything about the WHO Regulation Amendments being made as we speak, and these Regulation Amendments are what will allow the WHO in May 2024 to mandate its member-nations to quarantine, vaccinate, test, mask up, close businesses, and restrict travel. Here's the kicker: The WHO gets to announce an Emergency, at its perogative, based on EITHER health OR CLIMATE CHANGE and then the member-nations must comply with quarantining, vaccinating, testing, masking, closing businesses, and restricting travel. Since RFK Jr so far is still vehemently defending Climate Change, his support of the WHO is discouraging.

Trump's "look into" would be the gathering of the words of compromised supposed experts. Even after the blatant trail of havoc wreaked by the C19 shots, he's still bragging about the millions of lives he supposedly saved by captaining their warp speed development. He's addicted to whatever he considers politically expedient.

I was a strong Trump supporter in 2016, by the way.

Actually, the last time Trump bragged at rallies about the shots was August 2022. He has said all along that he will not allow any mandates of shots, masks, lockdowns, or any business closures, and that he will prohibit the Covid shots for all children in schools through college. The WHO will tell their member-states they have to vaccinate, mask, quarantine, and restrict travel for health or CLIMATE CHANGES that they annoynce, so Trump has committed to exit the WHO. He is also 100% against any parent allowing their child under 18 years old to have gender affirming surgery.

In Trump's recent campaign video he stated he was creating a Presidential Commission on Chronic Childrens' Health Conditions such as Autism and Allergies and their relationship with Big Pharma.
I hope the Commission will investigate the problem discovered that such a huge percent of kids that get gender surgery are on the Autism spectrum.

Good if he is. But don't vote for the ex-Prez who tried to force glyphosate on Thailand and failed to get it banned here, unless and until he's making a firm, public commitment to get a total ban enforced, if elected in 2024, by February 2025.

If he does that, since he's the more likely of the two to get a major party nomination, I might vote for him.

If he doesn't, I'll be voting against him.
